Sam Seaman is an associate in HunterMaclean's corporate practice group.

His practice in working with businesses focuses on all aspects of general corporate representation, primarily involving the drafting and negotiation transactions in various types of agreements. Sam has primarily worked with growth-stage to medium-sized businesses in the health care and technology industries. In his practice, Sam has negotiated for clients against every major health care insurance company and some of the largest hospital systems in the country.

Throughout his practice, Sam has worked closely with c-suite and board level individuals through the various problems businesses face. He has also participated in live interviews for online media on various legal subject matters and given presentations to current and prospective clients.

Sam graduated from the University of Kansas with a B.A. in Global and International Studies in 2012. As part of his undergraduate studies, he spent time in Cairo, Egypt. He went on to earn his M.B.A. in 2014 from the University of Saint Mary and his J.D., cum laude, in 2017 from the University of Florida Levin College of Law, where he served as general editor of the Florida Journal of International Law.

Sam recently moved to Savannah from Tampa, Florida, with his wife, Lauren, and their two daughters. In his spare time, in addition to spending time with his family, Sam has a passion for soccer, which he coached at the collegiate level and still enjoys playing, coaching, and spectating.
